During the month of July, KRAB will be taking part in community activities by broadcasting segments from CityFair, July 6th through 10th, 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., and the Black Community Festival, July 31st through August 2nd, noon to 8:00 p.m. In doing so, we salute the people who have kept us alive and vital all these years, as well as the folks first becoming aware of KRAB. We look forward to the challenge of growing with you, the listener, in our new home and in our continuing effort to present quality radio from diverse communities.

Thank you for all your support.

If you're a musician or if you would like to be one, here's your chance. I'm looking for tapes of "new music" (whatever that is) by local musicians (whoever you are) for an Institute for Mundane Studies program to air in August. You probably have exactly what I'm looking for just lying around the house. If you don't why not make something up and send it to me at KRAB. Two conditions hold. I'll probably only play those tapes that are of interest to me, for whatever obscure reason, and if you want your tape returned to you, you have to either include a stamped, self-addressed envelope or swear to whatever is or isn't holy that you will pick up the tape before September 1st. Any tapes left after that time will be either bulk erased or released as records under my name. For more information, leave a message at KRAB, 325-5110. I don't care if it's rock, jazz, classical, unclassifiable or just plain no good, if you think it's "new music" I want to hear it and, maybe, play it on the radio. Thanks.

SHORT WAVES: THE KRAB VOLUNTEER: A Person with many faces

Nearly one hundred eighty men, women, and children compose that group of special individuals collectively known as the KRAB volunteers. As the cliché goes, they come from all walks of life, span the age range 5 to 75, represent and express many divergent points of view, and share one thing in common: each person gives generously and freely of his or her time. They form the broadcast backbone of a radio station without commercials, and therefore, a radio station which could simply not afford to pay even one percent of them for their work. KRAB volunteers develop, prepare, produce, and broadcast almost all the shows aired. A regular volunteer submits program guide cards each month by the tenth, writes a script if needed, records interviews where appropriate, selects music from the KRAB record library or brings records from home, and finally engineers the actual broadcast as it is beamed to listeners throughout the Puget Sound region. In addition, volunteers regularly do routine jobs such as cleaning the studio, organizing the record library, and assisting the staff.

THE NEXT MEETING of the Jack Straw Memorial Foundation, Licensee of KRAB-FM, will be Thursday, July 9th at 7:30 p.m. at KRAB. The entrance to KRAB is at the rear of the building at 2212 S. Jackson Street.

Halina Pawl, 1976-present: Confessions of a KRAB Volunteer.

It all started when I was new to Seattle, out of work, looking and hearing that a local radio station needed an announcer. I got the license but the local radio station was sold again and the announcer position fell between the files. As luck would have it, one summer night as the sun fell into the Sound, then Operations Manager, Bruce Miller, swung down the path for dinner at my home by the zoo. He told me about how they needed board operators for this volunteer station called KRAB and that he would show me how to do it.

I finally got over the feeling that I was looking down the barrel of a rifle very time I looked at a live mike and some time opened up for a late-night radio show on Mondays. FRINGE BENEFIT would be a show featuring the talent, concerns, and paradoxes of local people and visitors to the area. For the first show, Bruce Miller and I interviewed 50 Pilchuck glassblowers, and I learned that there was a subtle but major difference between editing radio shows and films which was my work for the preceding three years. In spring of 1977, Bruce left and John Townes joined FRINGE BENEFIT which moved to Saturday afternoon. We were going to do a show about the Armageddon, inviting witches, clergy, and others to hash over the details, but we stuck to poets, artists, scientists, philosophers and people not often heard from on the subject of life. One seldom-heard-from group were the developmentally disabled featured in the two-part series "Who's Retarded?" We asked them directly and got some startling answers.

In autumn of 1978, FRINGE BENEFIT became a solo act. It continues to be a way for me to learn about the community, asking all sorts of questions and sharing the findings with the audience. In the 11-part series "The History of Love in Western Civilization," courtship, human, and property rights were traced from Ancient Greece to the 1930's Depression in America. Live interviews with lovers from the Victorian turn of the century through WWII helped orient me to the values of older people I was working with as a resident writer on the Seattle Arts Commission's Artist-in-the-City Program. The health programs examined the effects of pollution and allergic response on human well-being and social behavior. The energy programs examined the effects of the system's complications on the environment, economics, and human progress. Artists have brought their art and others have brought their secrets to FRINGE BENEFIT: the inner-workings of a gravely afflicted mountain climbing addict; how to survive as an old person in today's society; the significance of dreams. I am ever grateful to the people I interview and have had response over the years that my audience is too.

CITYFAIR 81 is an exhibition and celebration of life in the city - the 3rd through 12th of July at the Seattle Center. KRAB will be there with a booth to let people know about alternative radio, a vital force for living well in the city. We will also let them know how they can help KRAB. Many of the skills and ideas being presented at CITYFAIR in workshops and demonstrations could be used in completion of the solar greenhouse and construction of the station.

In addition, KRAB will be broadcasting live from CITYFAIR, 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., July 6th through 10th. Most regular programming will continue, interspersed with live interviews with CITYFAIR workshop leaders direct from Seattle Center.

Volunteers needed all around. Call 447-4800 and ask for the Volunteer coordinators to help at the CITYFAIR and get a free pass to the Fair. Call 325-5110 and volunteer time at the KRAB booth or in applying your newly acquired CITYFAIR skills in helping out KRAB's projects.

- 10:00 MORNING READING
Readings from Marxist and Anarchist sources with Frank Krasnowsky.
- 10:30 KRABJAZZ
If there weren't 31 days in July, Herb Levy wouldn't have to write a fifth note for KRABJAZZ this month. Let's just forget about a note for today's show and listen to music, okay?
- 12:00 LIVE BROADCAST: BLACK COMMUNITY FESTIVAL
The Black Community Festival is an annual event of historic and cultural significance to the residents of the Pacific Northwest. It is the only outlet for artistic and cultural expression available to the youth and talented individuals in the Black community. It offers the public, at large, the opportunity to witness and experience the best the community has to offer, at no charge. Last year's Festival at Judkins Park, lasted two days and attracted approximately five thousand people each day, but did not even receive the traditional mention on the six o'clock evening news (that is the norm for festivals of other communities) and most disappointing of all, not even a line of print in Seattle's daily newspapers. This year's festival will be much bigger and better; in fact, it will go from noon to 8:00 p.m. on all three days. In addition to performances by various jazz, rhythm and blues, gospel groups, traditional African ensembles, dancers, poets and comedians, there will be a parade of floats and beauty queens on the final day of the Festival, beginning at 23rd and Cherry and proceeding Empire Way up Jackson Street, past KRAB studios and ending on the grounds of Carfield Middle School, 21st and Jackson. Tune in to KRAB on all three days of this Black Community celebration!
- 8:00 R&B SHOW
Expect the best from the phantom collective doing this show. Funky rhythms, funky blues. Body rock very important here.
- 11:00 CHANCES
End of the month jazz with Harry Vye.
- 3:00 SURPRISE BOP SERVICES WITH MIKE BENSON
Audio exercises for the Woodchoppers Ball.

THE JACK STRAW MEMORIAL FOUNDATION

The Jack Straw Memorial Foundation is a private, non-profit organization dedicated solely to the guidance and support of KRAB-FM. The volunteer Board of Trustees guide the direction of the station and set general policy. In its seventeenth year of broadcasting, KRAB continues to dedicate its airwaves to the freedom of expression through a variety of cultures, music and spoken arts, and political issues. While the station does not espouse any particular cultural, political or social philosophy, it encourages programming that is diverse and often controversial. KRAB is a member of the National Federation of Community Broadcasters.
